

I strongly urge you to set aside any objections the National Association of Broadcasters has against localized program offerings satellite radio providers may not or may contemplate offering. Any such restriction would infringe on my right to receive information -- a right accorded me in the Constitution of the United States.

Healthy competition, especially in the use of the public's valuable broadcast spectrum, is what will improve information access for everyone. Regulations such as those proposed by the NAB do nothing to improve access or diversity in the public marketplace.
